Phil Douglas was dreaming dreams of shuffling into the no-hit temple of fame until the eighth inning, then the chance busted right in his face. Zachary Wheat, the most persistent paster of the Dodgers, shattered Phil's dreams with a single to left field. That jarred Shufflin' Phil and it also seemed to jar "Oil" Smith, the temperamental young Giant backstop. In making a return to Shufflin' Phil he hurled the ball over the pitcher's head into center field and Wheat went to second.

Then Hy Myers shot a single to right and Wheat scored. Konetchy forced Myers at second and little Peterkin Kilduff hoisted out to center. Then came Heinie Kruger, who deposited the pill in the left field bleachers for a home run scoring himself and Konetchy and tieing the score.

Remarkable Records

Where pitching and base running records through the year were in no way abnormal or unusual, the record on attack in the American League passed all boundaries of belief.

The most remarkable of all achievements was Ruth's home run colvidential in the most valuable ever put together in the sport—almost doubling his record of last year.

It is no flattery or bunk to suggest that Ruth's home run record was easily the greatest individual feat that baseball has ever known—the most amazing that any sport has ever known.

Fifteen Cleveland hits, six of them for extra bases, and four Detroit errors contributed to the second result, the league leaders scoring in every inning but the second. The game was called at the end of the cighth inning because of darkness.

Cleveland and Chicago each have two games yet trollay. Should the Indians lose both while Chicago wins two a tie would result.

Detroit's victory in the opener today broke Walter Mail's winning streak. He held a four-run lead when the Tigers solved his delivery in the eighth and tied the score. Uhle, who succeeded him, was taken out after passing one man in the eighth inning. Caldwell was in several tight places and was hit freely in the second game, but his support stood up fairly well behind him, considering the extremely cold weather.

The triumphant Dodgers took the first game by 4 to 3; then there was a clicking as of ivory in the second game, when the Dodgers threw in all their recruits and lost by the same score. In the first game Shuffin' Phil Douglas went seven innings without being hit and not a single Dodger could get K to first, which caused the skeptical to remark, "If these birds can't hit Phil Douglas, how are they going to knock Cleveland for a row of raspberry vines and get that world's championship?" season was just about over.

wall, then bounded clear back into the diamond.

It is a tradition that Lieutenant Cadore cannot beat the Giants, and this tradition was made good in the seventh. Alphonse Gaston, the Giant's new trial catcher, bounded a hit over Cadore's head and went to second on Barnes's out. George Burns cracked a double to left and Alphonse Gaston scored with the run that tied. With Bancroft out Young got a base on balls and ambled down to second. Frisch bounded another single over Cadore and Burns scored.

Taylor, the new Brooklyn catcher, was knocked out when Young crashed into him at the plate in an attempt to come home on a double steal. Taylor blocked the plate and also his man, but Young's spikes rasped his solar plexus and it was several minutes before the catcher could take his normal supply of wind.
